Chinese Transports Succeed Landing Troops of the Second Corps.

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Sept. 19.-Despatches

ived here from Shanghai confirm the port of a severe battle fought on the Yalu River, between the fleets of China The Chinese ships were escorting troops bound for Corea. The troops were the Second Army Corps, composed entirely of Huanese According to the Chinese version, there was no thought of surrender on either side. The ships of both nations, it is admitted, were terribly damaged. The Japanese had the advantage of the weather berth. The Chinese fleet lacked room for me noeuvering. The Chen-Yuen, these despatches say, after fighting her guns to the last, was sunk by torpedoes, and a smaller Chinese vessel, which was unarmed, was blown up. The steel cruiser Chao-Yung, it is added, was so damaged that she had to be beached to escape capture, while the cruiser Yang-Wei was driven ashore and has become a hopeless wreck. Both these ships are said to have been on nese warships were sunk, but their names are not given.

Further despatches state that in the attle, the entire Ple-Yang or northern fleet of China was engaged, reinforced by some ships of the Foo-Chow squadron. The Chen-Yuen was the flagship of northern fleet, and was commanded by Admiral Ting. The number of Japanese warships engaged is not stated, but as many of their were stationed off Ping-Yang inlet, at the mouth of the Ta-Tong River. their number must have been small. ered that the losses on both sides in the William Fleming Then Said to Have taval engagement will total up several

A Times despatch says that the Japanese fleet commenced the attack at noon, and the battle lasted until 5 P. M. The Chinese lost four ships. The Chen-Yuen was sunk, the King-Yuen was burned and the Chao-Yung and the Yang-Wei were stranded and partly burned. The Chi-Yuen, the Chinese vessel which was engaged in the fight of July 27, escaped, and it is presumed that she is safe.

The despatch to The Times also agrees in saying that the Japanese are supposed to have lost three ships, and it adds that many Chinese were killed and wounded, among the injured being Admiral Ting, Col. Von Hannekin and Capt. Tyler, the two latter being foreign volunteers.

The Times correspondent confirms the statement that the Chinese were successful in landing the troops, which was the object of the fleet's presence at the mouth of the Yalu River.

helped block the cable, and, to sum it up, it made everybody feel miserable—everybody save those who live in Brooklyn and who for weeks have been threatened with a water famine.

No one knows all about these things better than Farmer Dunn; yet he had the assurance to-day to say that it was all nonsense. 'he storm was only a mild one, and not even within seeing distance of the record.

"Why," he said, "just think of it. The total rainfall since 6 o'clock yesterday morning, until 10 o'clock this imorning, was only two inches and twenty-seven hundredths. That was for twenty-sight hours. In 1882, for the tweaty-four hours between Bept. 22 and it 33, six inches and seventeen one-hundredths rain fell. When, again, between Sept. 16 and 17, 1890, five inches and twelve one-hundredths of rain fell.

"I thought at one time to-day that this storm—or rather two hours of limbound the storm was not even 'in it.'

"you think it is bad enough in New York but look at the South. They have got more than twice as much, and stories of floods from that section ought soon to be coming over the wires."

Mr. Dunn then consulted his map, and from it gave out the information that the general rain area extended all along the Atlantic coast, from Florida to Massachusetts, and that it rained inland as far as the Ohio Valley and the lake regions. Throughout Georgia, he said, the rainfall was exceptionally heavy, four inches forty-one hundredths being reported up to 8 o'clock to-day. That was at Athens. In Blackville, Allendale and Greenwood, all in the same State, 2-40, 2.25 and 2 inches had fallen up to 8 o'clock.

After 10 o'clock the rain cased up a little bit, but about noon it began to fall apparently as hard as ever. An hour later Mr. Dunn again began figuring, and then he announced that the total rainfall up to that time had been 2.06 inches. Not very much after all, he thought, for thirty-one hours.

It did not seem to blow very much about here, yet Mr. Dunn says the wind was bowling along at a twenty-four-mile-an-hour rate at 8 o'cl
